- (54) THE TRANSMISSION FOR WORK VEHICLE
- (57) The transmission for work vehicle comprises the transmission housing, the transmission equipment, the transmission shafts, and the speed-changing equipment in the form of gear and bearing. The transmission housing consists of the first-part housing and the second-part housing which are assembled and tightened with bolts. The transmission housing is made of the ductile cast iron in a proportional scale as stipulated so as to enhance flexibility of the structure, and support as well as control the transmission shift position to be within the target range. The transmission can be shifted through the slot to any implement which is required to be attached to the work vehicle.

- (54) Multi Carrier
- (57) This invention concerns the Multi Carrier which consists of Structure One for attaching to an agricultural vehicle and can be attached to Structure Two which acts as a support for Structure Three and Structure Three is attached to the lifting arm set. The end of the lifting arm set consists of a frame and a joint that can be attached to Structure Four which is an agricultural accessory such as a gripper or bucket set. The central shaft for the accessory is grooved or gouged into a square for attaching to the end of the lifting arm set. Furthermore, Structure Four is also equipped with a guiding plate to aid installation of the hydraulic cylinder set which flips the accessory up and down. The process for detaching the lifting arm set and the accessory can be done by just one operator in a short amount of time as the process involves few components and is not complex.

- (54) NON-WOVEN INSULATING FIRE- RESISTANT MATERIAL FOR CLOTHING
- (57) The utility model relates to a non-woven fibrous insulating material having fire-resistant properties and is used for forming a lining layer in garments. The technical result of the proposed utility model lies in improving the fire-resistance and overall thermal resistance of an insulating material while preserving the integrity of said material. A non-woven insulating fire-resistant material for forming a lining layer in garments includes a blend of polymer fibres joined into a web by thermal bonding, and contains polymer fibres and bicomponent fibres of the concentric core-sheath variety. The bicomponent fibres have a linear density of 0.22 tex, and the polymer fibres include oxidized polyacrylonitrile fibres having a linear density of 0.17 tex, wherein the aforesaid blend contains (in mass%): 20-30% bicomponent fibres, and 70-80% oxidized polyacrylonitrile fibres. In such a blend, the ratio by mass of bicomponent fibres to oxidized polyacrylonitrile fibres is from 1:4 to 3:7. In terms of structure, the material is comprised of three layers: an upper layer, a lower layer, and an inner layer. The upper and lower layers are stronger than the inner layer and are formed by additional thermal bonding of the outer regions of the material using hot calender rolls.
